

September 2009 Connect the Dots in the Delta

(East side Delta "conveyance" canal already half completed)

Do you remember playing "Connect the Dots" when you were a kid? Well, the Governor, DWR and other state and federal officials have been playing connect the dots without inviting the Delta landowners to play....and its OUR game board they borrowed and are now trying to take away!

In this game, select state government agencies have been digging canals in various areas, getting ready to connect the canal sections as soon as their water bill(s) can be pushed through. You can see the "lines" already drawn by looking at online map services like Bing.com, or review the maps provided here.

It just takes some long pipes inserted under the roads the canal sections cross, and at least half the east side conveyance canal will be operational. Look at the closer views of each of the sections noted in the next few pages
